This is the final report for the Policy Outcome Research Grant “The Impacts and Outcomes of Welfare Reform across Rural and Urban Places in Kentucky” from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Administration for Families and Children. This research represents the unique collaboration of the Cooperative Extension System and Agricultural Experiment Station at the University of Kentucky, College of Agriculture.

The authors wish to gratefully acknowledge the Kentucky Cabinet for Families and Children and the University of Louisville for access to the administrative database used in this analysis and for their assistance in making this research possible. The authors would also like to acknowledge the hard work of our graduate assistant, Mathew Renfro-Sargent for his tireless commitment and dedication to this research.
