

RSS Oral History Project

A Few Resources on Doing Oral History

There are many resources available online to help anyone wanting to know more about doing oral history. The Baylor University Oral History Institute has an extensive list of resources available, but there are others as well. To help in finding some of these, below are some good starting places on the web.

Baylor University Institute on Oral History has great workshops and resources including brief publications on interviewing tips, information on video/audio recording, and a transcribing style guide.

<http://www.baylor.edu/oralhistory/>

The Oral History Association website has a section on doing oral history and links to several resources. This is the national professional association for oral historians.

<http://www.oralhistory.org/do-oral-history/>

The Center for Oral History at University of Hawai'i at Manoa website has a list of oral history resources that are available online.

<http://www.oralhistory.hawaii.edu/pages/links.html>

Southern Oral History Program at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill has resources including interview forms and an agreement for interview use.

<http://www.sohp.org/content/resources/>

Transcribing Oral History Interviews

There are lots of tips and resources online to help in transcribing oral history interviews. Here are just a few:

Baylor Institute of Oral History: <http://www.baylor.edu/oralhistory/index.php?id=23607>

Minnesota Historical Society: <http://www.mnhs.org/collections/oralhistory/ohtranscribing.pdf>